GET OUT THERE.

At an elevation of 3,649 feet, Roswell has a remarkably stable climate, perfect for all types of outdoor activities. Temperatures average 60°F in the winter and range from 90°F to 100°F during the summer.

Explore nearby recreation at the Pecos and Hondo rivers, Bottomless Lakes State Park, Bitter Lake National Wildlife Refuge, the Spring River Zoo, or the Mescalero Sand Dunes. With all of these geographic and natural features, you might just forget what brought you to Roswell in the first place.

LITTLE GREEN MEN DIDN'T PUT US ON THE MAP.

The story of Roswell doesn't begin on that famous day in 1947. In the 1800s, cattle baron John Chisum's large herd of cattle helped sustain Roswell's economy. Like many towns in southern New Mexico, Roswell was often visited by the outlaw Billy the Kid.

In the 1930s, Roswell was where Robert H. Goddard attempted to defy gravity. Known as the Father of Modern Rocketry, Goddard did some of his most influential work here, alongside Charles Lindbergh and Harry Guggenheim. The local planetarium bears his name today.

July 6, 1947 was the day when a local rancher told Roswell authorities about an object that had crashed. Investigating officials at the Roswell Army Air Field reported they had discovered a "flying disk." A few hours later, they revised their story and said that the object was a weather balloon. The mystery surrounding what really landed in that field is still hotly debated today.

SEE FOR YOURSELF WHY WE GET VISITORS FROM ALL OVER.

Located in southeastern New Mexico, Roswell is a city full of wonder. Much more than just the site of a famous intergalactic event, Roswell boasts fantastic recreational areas like Bottomless Lakes State Park, and unique attractions such as the Roswell Museum and Art Center.

No trip to Roswell is complete without a visit to the International UFO Museum & Research Center. Here, travelers can explore the facts behind the mysterious crash of 1947.

Local industries range from agriculture to aviation. Roswell is also home to one of the world's largest mozzarella cheese factories. With a thriving downtown, a variety of recreational activities, fun attractions, and tons of lodging options, today's Roswell is a great place to see for yourself.
